Foreword

I am honored to present the Annual Report of the Ministry of Women Community and Social Development for the fiscal year 2023-2024, a landmark year in our sustained mission to advocate for and uplift women, girls, and all marginalized communities in Samoa. This year, we have proudly fortified our commitment to human rights, evidenced by our inaugural submission to the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities—a significant step since Samoa ratified the Convention in 2016. This act is a resolute affirmation of our dedication to inclusivity and the protection of the rights of all individuals.

Additionally, we have continued our advocacy for gender equality with our contribution to the Beijing Platform +30, marking our third report since 2019 under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, ratified in 1992. Through these efforts, we strive not only to meet but to surpass global standards in gender equality and women's empowerment.

The challenges of the past year have tested our resilience and adaptability. In response, we have remained steadfast, guided by our core values of service, sincerity, and love, and driven by a unified commitment to social justice. Our collaborative efforts with both local and international partners have catalyzed impactful initiatives against domestic violence, bolstered economic empowerment, and enhanced the social welfare of our communities.

Reflecting on our journey and looking ahead, we are inspired by the Samoan proverb, "E sui faiga ae tumau fa'avae," which translates to "Methods may change, but principles remain the same." This saying highlights our adaptable yet principled approach to overcoming obstacles while staying true to our foundational goals of service and advocacy.

I extend heartfelt thanks to our dedicated team and partners, whose tireless work and collaborative spirit have been pivotal to our successes. I invite you to delve into this report and join us in forging a just and equitable future for Samoa.

Thank you for your solid support and partnership.
